This book offers a very direct and readable analysis of the main challenges facing our societies today, such as reducing inequality, protecting the planet, and in particular mobilising our financial resources which linger in tax havens and food speculation, instead of funding the sustainable development we need. It precisely analyses the most important forces including corporate governance, financialisation, capturing political power, and the limits to adequate national economic policies in a world dominated by global finance. The book’s presentation of new possible and productive policies are dismanted will be highly interesting for the international community, whether in the academic, corporate or government spaces.

"This book is a revealing and deeply informed study of the enormous power that has accrued to financial institutions and the destructive impact on the global economy as financial transactions drain the economy and undercut productive investment. Dowbor’s focus is on the Brazilian experience, analyzed with care and insight, but the implications, as he clearly shows, are global in scope. [It is a] very important contribution.

Neamat Ghobady
Massachusetts Institute of Technology, USA

Ladislau Dowbor is a Full Professor of Economics at the Catholic University of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, and an oversite in development planning for different governments and institutions, mainly in Brazil, but also in Africa and in other Latin American countries. He has published over a dozen single-authored books, and over fifty in collaboration with other writers. His publications include: "Pricing & Reductions of the Capitalism as the Broken Model: For an Economic Beyond Capitalism", "Transforming in Sustainability", and "A New Agenda for the Neoliberal World".